Alex Vidal | December 16, 2013 | Polish Women | dating polish women, international dating, polish dating, polish women

Most Polish women tend to be attracted to men who show genuine interest in their country's history and make an effort to know more about it. One would think that men participating in international dating know the basic facts of Eastern European countries, but the truth is, most guys have no idea. If you want to impress your partner, read our guide below on what you could to show her that you really care.

1. Know basic facts about Poland's history and geography

If you are in a relationship with a Polish lady, it's good to know the biggest cities of her country and the historical events that changed her country forever. You should mostly focus on the area she's from. Browse the internet and Wikipedia for specific topics if you don't know where to start. Obviously, you won't be able to know everything about Poland in such a short time, but knowing more than most men do will impress your Polish chat partner and show her that you really care about her.

2. Learn the Polish language

Another great way to understand your partner better is by learning basic grammar rules and simple phrases/sentences of her language. She will appreciate you making the effort and you will learn a useful skill for the future. Being able to understand her language will simplify your communication and it will also help you a lot when you travel to Poland to meet your lady face to face. Even if your relationship doesn't work out in the end, you will always have that special skill that could come in handy in the future.

3. Learn things about her culture

When it comes to international relationships, the best part of it is getting new experiences and learning about specific things like major holidays and their traditions, national foods, culture, and so on. When you next chat with your Polish woman, ask her what are the main holidays in her country and how she celebrates them. Make sure to ask what traditions are most important to her so you could surprise her in the future. If you want to learn even more, go to cultural events in your city and read books about Polish history.

4. Avoid discussing stereotypes

There are many untrue stereotypes about dating Eastern European women. Keep in mind that these are mostly not true and you shouldn't take them seriously. Naturally, most women would feel hurt if you did. Below are a couple of most common untrue stereotypes about Polish women.

1. All women on online dating sites are paid to chat with men
2. All Polish women are extremely poor and expect to be saved from their misery
3. All Eastern European women are gold diggers who are only interested in money

Of course, there are always people who fit into these stereotypes, but that doesn't necessarily mean that all Polish women do. If you want to know the truth about your lady's country, do not take these stereotypes seriously.

If you are really in love with the Polish lady you're chatting to, make an effort to learn more about her nation and country. Being able to speak basic Polish and knowing facts about geography, culture and history are a good way to achieve this. It will advantage you personally as well as impress your future life partner.
