Top 5 Russian Dating Mistakes to Avoid

Cheryl Weisz | July 30, 2013 | Russian Women | russian dating, russian woman, russian women

Are you having a tough time finding your perfect match on Russian dating websites? Perhaps you are missing something that is needed to get the relationship going.

Here are 5 common Russian dating mistakes that you should avoid in order to have a lasting relationship with your Russian woman.

The internet has many honest Russian dating websites.

1. You should be vigilant: Any Russian woman who asks you for money is just not real. Russian women would never ask for monetary help, as they have too much pride. Thus, you should be cautious if you find a Russian woman pleading for financial help.

2. You should avoid treating every Russian woman as a scammer: Most men who approach Russian women have a suspicious attitude. Though you should be watchful of any deception that may arise when dating a Russian girl, care should be taken not to magnify it unreasonably. Some men are so worried when dating a Russian girl that they are always attempting to uncover possible swindles, thus finally losing sight of their main purpose of finding a Russian bride. Successful and happy relationships are built on mutual understanding, respect, and certainty.

3. You should be confident: One of the most common mistakes that many men make when dating a Russian woman is indecisiveness. Russian women are generally attracted towards confident and positive men. The more you express your confidence, personally and professionally, the more she will be impressed by your charm. Avoid using phrases that indicate that you are an indecisive man. 'I've no idea', 'I'm not sure', etc. are a few of the phrases that may be damaging to your potential long-term relationship. Usually, Russian women admire men who are confident, and know what they want from life.

4. You should never boast of your money: Some men believe that Russian women on Russian dating websites can be purchased by spending adequate amounts of money. It's normal to tell about your background on a first meeting, but chatting too much of your belongings won't influence a Russian girl. Many men consider that giving a very expensive gift will make it easy to flatter a Russian girl. A Russian woman who is genuinely looking for love will not choose a partner and settle in an entirely different country just because her husband is wealthy. He must attract her with his nice attitude, charm, and personality. Of course, financial stability is required, but it's not everything.

5. You should be serious: Generally, your Russian woman will wait at least four to six months for you to come down to her country for a personal meeting. If you did not turn up within this period, she will look for somebody else who she does consider serious for a stable relationship. If you are ready (financially, physically and emotionally) to propose to your Russian girlfriend, you should not delay the first meeting any longer than necessary.

There are numerous legal Russian dating websites, enabling you to search and contact a Russian woman that you like. Your sweet words can go a long way towards attracting your Russian girl. Be attentive towards your lady, make her feel special, and you will find that she is gradually taking an interest in you. Men who boast unnecessarily, and treat Russian women like scammers, will have a tough time finding the right partner. If you are serious in your search of love, avoid making these common mistakes.
